Meghan Hungate is a partner in the New York office of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher. She is a member of the firm's Technology Transactions Practice Group.

Meghan represents both public and private companies and financial sponsors in connection with complex intellectual property and technology transactions issues relating to outsourcing arrangements, corporate mergers and acquisitions, venture and private equity investments, global branding, and the development, acquisition, licensing and exploitation of intellectual property. She regularly counsels clients across a range of industries including software, high-technology, energy, media, pharmaceuticals, and finance, and has significant experience in negotiating and documenting intellectual property and information technology representations and warranties, transitional services and licensing agreements, collaboration agreements and joint venture arrangements.

She has been recognized as “One to Watch” by The Best Lawyers in America® in the area of Intellectual Property Law and consistently named in the Super Lawyers New York Metro “Rising Stars” list since 2013.

Meghan received her Juris Doctor in 2009 from the University of Pennsylvania Law School, where she was an associate editor of the Journal of Constitutional Law. She received her Bachelor of Arts in German and Political Science from the College of the Holy Cross in 2003.

She is admitted to practice in the State of New York, and before the United States District Courts for the Southern and Eastern Districts of New York. Meghan is also a member of the New York Intellectual Property Law Association.
